Mark your calendars for Tuesday, 24th May at 11:00am Central, 9:00am Pacific when Jeff Tapper of Digital Primates will be discussing the above topic with the Flash Media Server Users Group. He'll share perspectives from multi-screen video development projects that he's worked on and suggest some practices that you can bring to your own projects.

With a plethora of devices and platforms on the market today, delivering video content across multiple screens is a critical issue to address in your streaming media application. How can you best deliver video content to users on their chosen screen in a way that makes the most sense from a development and business perspective?
